

Chinese Pharmacopoeia 2010 Chapter 9-Treatment of sore throat - Chinese Pharmacopoeia (1924, 4th ed.) and, by HY Wu A: Publication-related references would be Google Scholar Web of Science Scopus A: To collect the number of publications of each author, you can use Google Scholar. The ORCID is a unique identifier for researchers and scientists worldwide. You can use the ORCID to identify your personal information, so you don't need to fill many fields (i.e. email address, institutions) when you are submitting an ORCID profile. You can use the your ORCID to verify authorship: Google Scholar Web of Science Scopus To collect the citations of a document, you can use Google Scholar It is possible to use Google Scholar to search directly for a reference, by using the "Cited by" button from Google Scholar. Q: How to handle converting Json::Value to a string? I'm using Facebook's Javascript SDK which returns a json formatted string with a status object. When I do this: static QString facebookAuthorizationResultToQString(const FB::AuthorizationResult& result) { QString resultStr; switch (result) { case FB::AuthorizationResult::Status::Success: resultStr = "Success"; break; case FB::AuthorizationResult::Status::Denied: resultStr = "Denied"; break; default: resultStr = "Error"; break; } return resultStr; } ...or this: static QString facebookJsonToQString(const Json::Value& json) { QString resultStr; switch (json.type()) { case Json::ObjectValue: resultStr = QString("Success"); break; case Json::ArrayValue:
